Chapters 9 and 10 Vocabulary Check

Many of the words describing Robin's life in Sir Peter's castle are unfamiliar to contemporary readers. Use the context in the story below to fill in the blanks with words from the word bank, all of which came from The Door in the Wall.

Word Bank

portcullis - a grate made of iron or wood that can be lowered to block passage through an entryway.

yeoman - an attendant or servant in a royal household farrier - a person who shoes horses.

armory - a place where weapons are stored.

turret - a small tower that is part of a larger castle.

lancer - a soldier on horseback, whose main weapon is a long, pointed rod.

drover - a person who herds or drives cattle or sheep.

Henri was a (1)_____. He took pleasure in his work because he loved horses, and caring for a horse's feet meant caring for the whole horse. He was headed toward his favorite fishing spot when he spotted Matthew, the (2)_____, who said that his sheep were acting strangely.

"They won't return to the castle," explained Matthew. "They're acting as if something terrible has happened."

Henri decided not to go fishing, and hurried back toward the castle. As he walked, he heard thundering feet. He turned and saw Saul, the (3)_____, galloping toward him on one of the King's horses. Saul was dressed in armor, and was carrying a long, pointed weapon with him.

"Is something amiss at the castle?" asked Henri. "Matthew says the sheep are acting strange, and that they won't return home."

"The King's (4)_____ asked me to come," said Saul. "He was keeping watch from the (5)_____ when he saw a band of travelers headed toward the castle. He lowered the (6)_____ to keep the castle safe, then went to the (7)_____ to count the bows and swords. He brought me this shield and asked me to come send the travelers on their way."

"It's a good thing I shod Daniel last week!" said Henri. "You'll be able to ride quickly today!"

"Yes," replied Saul as he rode away, "You're the best farrier around!"

Enrichment Activity - A Medieval Game

Duck on a Rock: When Robin plays with his friends in Lindsay, he plays some games that we still play today. The boys play hide-and-seek, which children still love; and shooting-at-a-mark, which is simply target practice. Duck on a rock, though, isn't played anymore--probably because it was so dangerous! Read the following medieval version of the game, and then play the safe version.

Medieval Version: When Robin and his friends played duck on a rock, they would have found a tree stump and set a large rock, called a drake, on top of it. Each boy would find a smaller rock, called a duck, of his own, and the boys would form a large circle around the stump. One boy, the guard, stayed next to the stump, with his duck at his feet.

When play started, the boys circling the stump would throw their ducks at the drake, trying to knock it down. When the drake fell over, the guard had to put the drake back on the stump, and then retrieve his own duck. Then he could chase the other children, who had to run to get their ducks and make it back to the circle before the guard tagged them. If the guard tagged a child, then that boy would become the guard. If not, then he'd stay the guard for another round.

1. How could kids playing Robin's version of duck on a rock have gotten hurt?

Safe version: Put a bowling pin or stuffed animal on an overturned box. Give each player a hacky sac or other soft ball. Use the same rules as the medieval version.

2. How is this version safer?

Writing Activity - Robin's Diary

In the beginning of The Door in the Wall, Robin's mother and father both go to serve the King and Queen; Robin becomes sick and loses the use of his legs; and Brother Luke, a stranger, comes to rescue Robin, taking him to live in an unfamiliar place. And that's just the first chapter!

Robin's life continues to be eventful throughout the book. List at least five other major events from Robin's life in the story. For each event, write a sentence or two to describe what you think Robin's feelings and emotions would have been at the time:

3.

4.

Keeping a Diary

Many people keep diaries or journals to help them deal with difficult times, and to help them remember good times. Robin didn't keep a diary, but if he had, it would have been full of stories! Choose two of the events you listed, and, pretending that you're Robin, write a diary entry for each one.

The Life of Marguerite de Angeli

Marguerite de Angeli's life had two main focuses: her art and her family. Both were constants in a long and happy life.

Mrs. de Angeli was born Marguerite Lofft on March 14, 1889 in Lapeer, Michigan. As a child, she enjoyed singing, writing and drawing. At age 15 she got her first job--singing! She concentrated on singing and auditioned for the Oscar Hammerstein Opera Company at age 20. Her parents convinced her not to join the company, and a year later she married John Daily de Angeli, whom she had known for two years.

In 1916, John and Marguerite, along with their two sons, Jack and Arthur, moved to Detroit, Michigan. It was there that Mrs. de Angeli rediscovered her artistic talents. She took a few drawing classes and had a daughter, Nina. Then, in 1921, she met a neighbor, Maurice Bower. Mr. Bower was a professional illustrator, and he became Mrs. de Angeli's mentor and tutor. Under his guidance, her drawings improved to publishable quality. In 1922, she sold her first illustrations to a church publication.

For the next 13 years, Mrs. de Angeli concentrated on her family. The de Angelis were blessed with two more children, Ted and Maurey. Then, in 1935, Mrs. de Angeli wrote her first book, Ted and Nina Go to the Grocery Store. She enjoyed writing and her books were popular. She spent the rest of her life writing, with great success. Her books have won both the Newbery Medal and the Caldecott (honor) Medal, plus many other awards. The Door in the Wall and Bright April are perhaps her best-known and best-loved books. Mrs. de Angeli died on June 16, 1987. She was 98 years old.

Life in the Middle Ages

The Door in the Wall is set in the Middle Ages, during the fourteenth century. It is clear from the novel that Robin's life is very different from life in the twenty-first century. Two of the aspects of Robin's life that are different from our own are the Black Death and knighthood.

In the Middle Ages, a disease known as the Black Death, or the plague, spread through Europe, killing one third of the population. This deadly disease first appeared in 1347, and came back periodically until the 1700s. People who were sick with the plague broke out in large black spots called buboes. The buboes were swollen lymph nodes that oozed pus and blood. The characteristic markings caused by the plague gave it the names Bubonic Plague and Black Death.

There are two major explanations of where the Black Death came from. Most people believe that the illness was a plague carried by rats and passed to humans through fleabites. Some scientists, though, think that the Black Death was not caused by plague at all, but by the anthrax virus. The debate has not been settled.

Knights in the Middle Ages went through a lengthy training process. You didn't have to be of noble birth to enter into knighthood, but few poor boys could afford the equipment and training. A future knight would be taught at home until he was about seven, and then would be sent to another noble household to serve as a page. As a page, the boy would learn basic skills of knighthood while acting as a servant to his elders. Around age fourteen, the boy would become a squire, or one knight's servant. He would serve and learn from that knight until he was about twenty, at which time he himself would become a knight.

Thinking Questions:

Modern doctors know a lot more than medieval doctors did about how disease is spread and cured. What advice would a modern doctor give to a medieval doctor about how to lessen the death toll from an outbreak of the Black Death?

If you were a noble-born boy in the Middle Ages, what duties would you have at your age? What do you think your life would be like?

Extension Activity: Maps and Math

Robin, Brother Luke, and John-go-in-the-Wynd set off on a long journey to take Robin from St. Mark's to Lindsay. It was a journey that could be made in less than two hours by car, but it took Robin's group over a week.

1. List some reasons why travel in the Middle Ages was so different from travel today.

Marguerite de Angeli gives her readers some information to help them figure out where the fictional town of Lindsay is located:

- Lindsay is about 100 miles from St. Mark's, which is in London.
- The journey from St. Mark's to Lindsay takes 9 days.
- The travelers pass through Oxford, which they reach at the end of the fourth day of their journey.
- Lindsay is near the English/Welsh border.

The following information is not in the text, but will help you answer the questions:

- Oxford is about 50 miles northwest of London
- The Welsh border is west of both Oxford and London
- In October, the sun rises at about 8:00 a.m. in London and sets at about 7:30 p.m.

2. How far is Lindsay from Oxford?
3. How many miles do the travelers walk each day?
4. If the travelers walk for all but four sunlit hours each day, how many miles per hour do they travel?
5. If it takes the group half of one day and half of the next to get through the big forest near Lindsay, then how big is the forest?
6. Draw a map of the group's journey. Use clues from the book to put the following places on your map: London, the White Hart, Oxford, Wychwood Bec, Lindsay.

The Door in the Wall*, by Marguerite De Angeli Doors as Symbols

What is a symbol? A symbol is something that represents something else. For example, a wedding ring is a symbol of everlasting love. Many things in everyday life can be thought of as symbols. What does each of the following common symbols represent?

1. A red light--
2. Ten candles on a cake--
3. A sign with a picture of a deer on it--
4. A string tied around a finger--
5. A checkered flag--

There are many mentions of doors in The Door in the Wall, starting with the title. Some of the doors are real, but most of them are symbolic.

- In the first chapter, Brother Luke tells Robin, "Thou hast only to follow the wall far enough and there will be a door in it."
- In the third chapter, Brother Luke says that he will teach Robin to read because "reading is another door in the wall."
- In the fourth chapter, Brother Luke tells Robin, "Remember, even thy crutches can be a door in the wall."
- In the seventh chapter, Sir Peter tells Robin, "If we cannot serve in one way, there is always another. If we do what we are able, a door always opens to something else."

Answer the questions about doors:

1. What do you think that the doors in the book are symbols of?
2. What else in Robin's life could be compared to a door?
3. What symbolic doors did Robin's illness close to him? What doors did it open?
4. What symbolic doors did Robin open in Brother Luke's life? In John's?
5. What doors have opened in your life? What doors do you think will open later?
